Brunnen forms part of the municipality of Ingenbohl and has 8000 inhabitants. It was once an important trading centre on the Lake of Lucerne. The era of the grand hotels in the middle of the 19th century represented the heyday of the town as a holiday resort. A hint of the charm of that time still lingers in the hotels that remain there today. Brunnen played an important role at the time of the founding of the Confederation. In 1315 the revised "Bundesbrief" (deed of federation) was signed following the Battle of Morgarten.

History

In medieval times, the waterside settlement of Brunnen emerged between an estuary of the Lake of Lucerne and the slope of the forest of Ingenbohl. Fishermen and boatmen inhabited the little village. With the increasing importance of the Gotthard route, Brunnen became the principal harbour for the land of Schwyz and an important loading station for cattle trade with Tessin and Italy.

With the first steamboats and the construction of the Axenstrasse at the end of the 19th century Brunnen began to develop into a tourist resort. Important personalities such as King Ludwig II of Bavaria, the composer Richard Wagner or the fairytale author Hans Christian Andersen visited the village. A row of hotel buildings of the «Belle Epoque» and the lakeside promenade are reminders of that time.

MUSEUMS

In Schwyz, history is more alive than anywhere else in Switzerland. At the Museum of the Swiss Charters you will find the historic Federal Charter, a unique document which is of considerable importance for the national history of Switzerland. In the Forum of Swiss History visitors will experience how the people between 1300 und 1800 lived in Switzerland. The Ital Reding Estate is one of the most treasured building-groups of the canton of Schwyz.

Please ask for the brochure of the village of Schwyz. It gives interesting information on the culture and history of Schwyz. The Tourist Information Centre in Schwyz will gladly organize guided tours through the museums, or the village of Schwyz.
